

October 19, 2004

To whom it may concern,

I listen to K-LOVE radio in my area at 91.1 FM here in Littleton, Colorado. It is an encouragement to me and my family because it broadcasts positive news around the United States and the World. I believe it is important to focus on positive information about people because we are constantly surrounded by negative things and in stressful times it can be depressing. I feel K-LOVE is very fair and balanced in that it does not bash or put down other individuals that have different opinions than that of the management of the radio station. Instead it promotes a true love and concern for all of our fellow mankind.

I believe that if K-LOVE were to be displaced by an LPFM broadcaster providing other programming it would be a disservice to the public interest here in Colorado as well as many cities across the U.S..

The only thing I do not understand is that are the LPFM stations less expensive to run, and are they able to be owned by a group like K-LOVE, and if so, what would be involved in K-LOVE taking over one of these LPFM spots and we could continue to have the same service by K-LOVE that we currently experience? How much regulation would FCC have over the LPFM compared to K-LOVE?

Thank you for your listening to our comments.

Cheryll Hostetler